Senator Knox's First and Last Resolutions of Peace.

Our neighbor the Times so far mis tion and the general history of the to say with every appearance of to the advantage of the public. sincerity:

"Now it is proposed to throw out the League altogether. That was indeed proposed by Senator KNOX during the debate, but the idea then seemed so fantastic that it was virtually withdrawn. Now he proposes it again. If he stood alone, it might be regarded as a case of audacity run mad, or as persistence in a fixed idea: but it seems that in some Senatorial quarters, at least, this astounding auggestion is taken seriously, and is actually considered hospitably by Senator Underwood,"

The "iden" which the Times describes variously as fantastic, as audacious and as the persistent manifestation of a personal pride of opinion was not proposed to defeat the President's scheme of interweaving. It was proposed by Senator Knox long before the process of interweavterweave was known to anybody.

Three hundred and eighty-two days ago Mr. Knox introduced in the Senate a resolution senarating the business of concluding peace with the Central Powers from the business of considering "any project for any general that resolution;

"Whereas, Conferences are about to take place, with the purpose to complete, to perfect and to guarantee the attainment of the war aims aforesaid and thus to pass to the state of formal peace; be it thereto: . . .

"That any project for any general league of nations, or for any sweeping change in the ancient laws of the sea as hitherto recognized as international law and violated by the Teutonic Powers, should be postponed for the victorious belligerents, but by all the nations if and when at some future time general conferences on those The common sense of this proposal to adopt the short cut to formal pence and to take up afterward the considerorganization is even more manifest to ordinary intelligence to-day than it was three hundred and eighty-two days ago. If the Knox resolution could have been adopted then and made the policy of the United States Government we should have been spared the miserable spectacle or more to-day by billions of dollars on the material account, and immeasurably better off in the esteem and confidence ated with us in the war.

"When that treaty comes back, gentlemen on this side will find the covenant not only in it, but so many threads of the treaty tied to the covenant that you cannot dissect the covenant from the treaty without destroying the whole vital structure The structure of peace will not be vital without the League of Nations, and no man is going to bring back a cadaver with him."

Times is apart from the fact when it describes the Knox resolution as during the past three hundred and eighty-two days have absolutely all the time the only way out of the difficulty created by an andacious and deflant and immeasurably expensive attempt at autocracy.
